 My favorite book/movie BY FAR would be the Hunger Games! I have read the series many times and I personally like the books better because you understand it from Katniss' view so you know how she's feeling and it just gets more into depth!

 I followed you on twitter @barnabaswax and on Facebook @HannahLaurasaxson. my favorite book is all of The Mortal Instruments books. They are in the process of making the first book into a movie and I have honestly super excited for it to come out next year and my favorite movie is either THG or Bridge is Too Far! I have watched it four times and have cried every time 😊

 Hi Wawa! This is such a cool contest! First off, my favorite book is, Catching Fire, the sequel to The Hunger Games. It is filled with so much action and so many thrilling surprises. It will keep you hooked, from the first page. Thankfully, just like its predecessor, it's going to be adapted into a film version in 2013. Secondly, you are an inspiration to me! A teacher and a chef? How cool! I am currently a sophomore in college, pursuing a degree in elem. education. I also love to cook 😊
 I followed you on Twitter too. @TaraKWarren03! Thanks for this awesome opportunity!

 I followed you on twitter @danielstuart, and liked you on Facebook also @Daniel Stuart. My favorite book and movie would honestly be the Hunger Games. I know this is cliché but it was an awesome book. I feel that both the book and the movie were great, but the book was better. The movie would've been better if they put a voice over of what Katniss was thinking while she was in the games.

 My favorite book is Harry Potter and the order of the Phoenix and the movie not so much 😊 Don't think I have a favorite movie I like too many Favorite book is still The Wishing Game, and the movie version (called Get a Clue) is so bad that it's painful to even say that it's an adaptation. Break a leg tonight... saids: I never got out with two friends I rarely get to see [PG - Drew said it was nice to put a name with a face].
